Baron Des Letameris is the vice-chancellor in the service of Prince Jurkast of Maribor. Once known for his loyalty and administrative skills, he held an important position within the princely court. However, his reputation was irreparably tarnished after a mysterious event: the baron was struck by a curse that transformed him every six hours into a werepig. This uncontrollable and humiliating transformation forced him to live in fear of being discovered.[citation needed]

Biography

He was approached by a member of Coram Agh Terra who told him that the only way to break this spell would be to commit a specific act of treason. Under the pressure of this curse and in the hope of permanently regaining his human form, the baron stole extremely sensitive royal documents, proving that the kingdom's crown princess was actually a bastard conceived between Prince Jurkast and a dryad. The disclosure of this evidence directly threatened the dynastic legitimacy and constituted a serious betrayal against Prince Jurkast. However, the guild found him, and he revealed the truth to them as well as to the prince and Triss Merigold. The baron regained his human form but died upon the departure of the guild and the princess for Redania, where she went to marry.[1]
